

Inzamia

Far-flung Flair

Tuesday, December 30, 2008

Inzamia—pronounced in-zá-mia—is as striking a mixture of syllables as the shop is an exotic assortment of furnishings from three different continents. The name, which was coined by the owners, brothers Sachin and Bhavin Dhupelia, pays homage to the places they have called home—India, South Africa and Miami. “We have brought together an eclectic selection of ethnic and traditional Indian carvings, British- and Dutch-Colonial items and clean-cut designs,” says Sachin. New for 2009 is the launch of their furniture line. “If clients bring us images of pieces they like, we create our own interpretations of them,” says Bhavin. “While we’re manufacturing pieces, we send clients photos during the different stages of development.” See their varied furnishings here. See my article about the shop on The Miami Herald web site here.

-Saxon Henry